

Kaleena Deshawn

You stand in front of the bathroom mirror naked and crying, not sure how you got here in the first place. You forget to close the door in your mindless state and your sister wanders in to find you frozen there.

We never pay enough attention to the people who mean the most to us. We don't think of them enough, we don't say I love you enough; it's really a shame. It's a shame that once we lose someone we can't think of anything else.

As she spoke to me I couldn't believe what I was hearing.

It was a warm summer morning the sun shining brightly against the blinds and lighting up the bright green walls of her bedroom even though they were closed.

"What," I said as I looked at her blankly, my mouth slightly agape and my eyes beginning to water as she continued to speak. "There was an accident last night, she didn't make it." I stared ahead blankly not at her or anything really I still don't know what I was looking for, maybe an answer to what the hell was going on right now because I didn't fucking understand any of it.